JOB MARKET REPORT · NO. 1 · OCTOBER 2026

Most sales jobs show a number. Few show the one that matters.

I analyzed every live sales rep posting on Braun Board: 1,473 SDR, AE and account manager jobs from 229 companies. Here's what they told you about pay, and what they left out.

THE SHORT VERSION · 1,473 POSTINGS, 229 COMPANIES

Three in four show a number. One says how many reps hit quota.

Pay transparency is real progress. But for a commission job, the details that decide what you actually take home were almost never in the post.

75%
showed a pay number 206 of 229 companies, in at least one posting

19%
showed both base and commission
53 of 229 companies

1%
gave a number for the quota
8 of 229 companies

1
said how many reps hit quota
out of 1,473 postings

How the 1,473 showed pay

419 showed a base salary and nothing about commission. 408 showed an OTE or commission figure with no base, so you can't see how much is guaranteed.

- 19% Base and commission (274)
  You can see both parts of the paycheck.
- 28% OTE or commission only (408)
  A total or variable number, but no base.
- 28% Base only (419)
  A salary, but nothing about commission.
- <1% Unclear (4)
- 25% No pay at all (368)

WHAT THE POSTINGS LEFT OUT

The details that make the pay reachable

Of 1,473 postings:

DETAILS	POSTINGS	COMPANIES
said how many reps hit quota	1	1 of 229
gave a number for the quota	15	8 of 229
described a ramp or onboarding timeline	7	5 of 229
gave a sales cycle length	30	18 of 229
mentioned accelerators	52	13 of 229
gave a deal size, even roughly	62	19 of 229
mentioned clawbacks	0	0 of 229

Quota numbers that did appear were mostly meeting or deal targets, like “6 qualified demos per month.” None of the 15 gave a dollar quota.

The one that said it

Kong: “49% of reps are achieving 100%+ of quota and fully ramped reps are averaging 117% attainment.”

Two others shared a team result without saying how many reps hit: Ramp’s top 20% of reps, and Samsara’s DACH team.

Here’s how Vedish Kukshal, a rep, put it:

“If pay and quota are both missing, I’m out. I’m not doing detective work for a role that wants 40 hours a week.”

WHAT TO DO WITH THIS

If the posting won’t tell you, ask. And if it only shows a base, ask what the commission target is and how it’s paid.

BEFORE ANY FIRST CALL

My top five questions

When they ask, “Do you have any questions for us?” these are the five I always ask.

1. “What do your top sellers have in common?”
2. “Six months from now, what would make you say hiring me was a great decision?”
3. “What percentage of fully ramped reps earned their full OTE last year?”
4. “What does the onboarding and ramp period look like?”
5. “When are you looking to make a decision?”

How I did it. I analyzed every live posting on Braun Board for individual SDRs, AEs and account managers on October 25, 2026: 1,473 postings from 229 companies in the US, Canada and the UK, each straight from the company’s own careers page. Pay comes from the posting text and the pay fields the company’s job system shows. For everything else, AI read each posting, and a detail only counted when it quoted the posting word for word and gave a number where one was needed. Requirements about a candidate’s past don’t count. Then 50 random postings were checked line by line (no false “yes” calls, one borderline miss), and every quota, attainment and ramp result was reviewed individually. Postings change after they go up, so this is a snapshot.
